

Red Cross off course

There are a few really good things in this world. The Red Cross is one of them. Making neutral organizations political definitely is not.

Last weekend the International Red Cross held a conference in Geneva, Switzerland, where the organization made a serious mistake that could affect its operations for years. This conference should be the one place where all rival nations are able to come together and discuss problems without fear of exclusion or political discrimination.

But this year the delegation from the government of Kenya pushed a motion through that expelled the South African government's delegation from the conference. In retaliation, the South African government asked that all representatives of the International Red Cross leave their country.

A non-profit, humanitarian organization is not the place for governments to make this kind of political statement.

By instigating such behavior, the very people the Red Cross is helping (and supposedly those who oppose apartheid want to help) are being hurt irreparably. Although the South African Red Cross is still in the country, they are not able to do some things the International Red Cross can do.

In South Africa, the Red Cross has been allowed to visit prisoners-of-war — including political prisoners like Nelson Mandela. They work with the South African Red Cross in black townships and give aid to 20,000 refugees from Mozambique.

In the war between Iraq and Iran, the Red Cross is the only group who is able to go freely between both sides. The same is true for many other areas of conflict. In hundreds of places, the Red Cross is the only contact prisoners have with the outside world.

If politics are allowed to enter a neutral organization such as this, the world loses a vital impartial voice. All countries will have more difficulty trusting the Red Cross.

But the most frightening aspects of the expulsion is the possible precedent it sets. If, one day, South Africa is expelled from the conference by a majority vote, the next time it could be the United States, or the Soviet Union, or others until the whole mission and purpose of the Red Cross is frustrated.

The suspension of the South African delegation is not going to help those who are the victims of apartheid. Instead, it will only isolate them from what aid they are now receiving.

Many of the nations of the world are on record against apartheid. They have rightly voiced their opposition to it.

But the Red Cross is not the place to make any such political statements.

The above is the opinion of the Editorial Board of the Daily Universe, which consists of the editor, the editorial page editor, a student staff member, a teacher of opinion writing and the associate publisher; the opinions expressed are not necessarily those of Brigham Young University, its administration, its student body or sponsoring church. The Board meets Thursdays at 1 p.m. in 562 ELWC. The meeting is open to the public.

LETTERS

Help homeless

Editor:

I agree with Wayne Jones' letter of Oct. 23 regarding the homeless.

I have also seen many homeless individuals while serving a mission in New York and also while living in inner-city Los Angeles for several years. While homeless individuals do need help, many may be too mentally disturbed to accept it. We still need to try to offer assistance when asked and be aware of the problems of the homeless.

There are homeless everywhere, including Utah Valley and Salt Lake City and I hope we will all be aware of this and appreciate those things we do have — our food, shelter, clothes etc.

No on Proposition 1

Editor:

After reading the Oct. 30 issue of the Universe, I wondered out loud "what are the facts concerning Proposition 1?" Mr. Messina's letter to the editor supports a "no" vote and Ms. Ostlund's article defends her choice to vote "yes."

Unfortunately, Ms. Ostlund does not state facts, and when she does, she does not give emotional appeals that typify the huge media blitz sponsored primarily by Intermountain Health Care (IHC). There are 26 so-called "non-profit" hospitals in Utah. If they are to be classified with churches and charities they must provide a benefit for the public that "for-profit" hospitals do not.

One of the conditions for non-profit status, as the State Constitution outlines, concerns charity care. A Utah County Attorney became outraged as IHC sued families and actually took their homes away from them. This is how this issue came before the Supreme Court. IHC wants to reap the rewards of big business and still hide behind its tax exempt status. To do so they seek to amend the State Constitution.

wives to their husbands and better mothers to their children?

Winning and/or baking bread, talking to one's husband, and helping one's children with their calculus may all be worthwhile goals and any of them might be a sufficient reason for pursuing an education. However, none of them are necessary for marriage and clever children (or she might never marry and never mother). What's missing from the editorial is the simple fact that women should be educated for all the reasons men should — beginning with the radical concept that learning is a good in itself. Employers, men and little kids benefit when a woman develops every piece of her God-given intellect, but she need not do it for them in order to justify it. So how do we justify educating women? We don't, anymore than we justify eternal progression or perfection. We don't need to justify the desire to be like God.

Park legally on Sunday

Editor:

Some people have commented recently about campus police officers working on Sunday. It's too bad they have to. However, if in our panicked rush to get to church on time we stopped parking in areas reserved for handicapped people and emergency vehicles, officers wouldn't need to issue tickets on the Sabbath. Let's strike a blow for policeman spirituality. Park legally on Sunday!

No need to justify women's education

Editor:

More than a decade has passed since I was an undergraduate on this campus. However, the editorial stance of the Daily Universe and many of its readers appears to have remained constant. Why else, in 1986, would we need a house editorial to justify the goal of educating women on the grounds that it makes them better breadwinners, better

You — at BYU

Each school year, over 27,000 people walk the campus of BYU. Although in close proximity, we all are, for the most part, strangers.

Each day — in classes, on the sidewalks or in the library — we pass thousands of unknown faces. Often we're too embarrassed or worried about what other people think of us to wonder about anyone else.

But behind every face is an interesting person. Everyone has something unique about him.

Among BYU students there are current and former businessmen, mothers, foreign students. Some have been planning all their lives to attend BYU, some are shocked to find themselves here.

In this issue of Monday Edition, we've interviewed a few of those people. They may not lead spectacular lives — they're all 'just' students. But like everyone else, they each have a story to tell.

Magleby says Owens may win seat

By MICHAEL LEONARD
Universe Staff Writer

The Republicans of Utah's Second Congressional District will probably lose a seat in The U.S. House of Representatives tomorrow to Democrat Wayne Owens, said a BYU political science instructor.

"There's a growing sense that they're (second district) not being adequately represented," said David Magleby, associate professor of political science. "The problem has to do with effectiveness."

The latest poll from Dan Jones and Associates shows Owens with a seven point lead over Shimizu. Registered voters favor Owens by 48 percent to Shimizu's 41 percent; 2 percent are for other candidates and 9 percent are undecided (margin of error is +/- 5 percent).

Magleby said he thinks people believe Owens will be more effective than Republican Tom Shimizu in protecting Utah's interests.

"I think Shimizu may well be more versed on county or city government, but he's not very knowledgeable about nuclear weapons, the deficit, etc.," said Magleby.

Knowledge about the issues has always been Owens strength, he said. Owens has spent a great amount of time studying the issues that Congress is dealing with.

"Shimizu has had to spend a lot more of his time just getting organized and ready to run for the office, not studying Gramm-Rudman, or the defense spending bill, or where he might cut defense spending to keep the deficit down," he said.

Since Owens is in the lead, many people probably don't see him as the liberal candidate Republicans have labeled him to be, said Magleby.

"For him (Owens) to be ahead in what is primarily a Republican district, a pretty conservative district, means that a lot of people don't see him as Teddy Kennedy's clone after all," said Magleby.

Television advertisements early in the campaign lauding Owens as a "cheap" fiscal conservative, were part of an offensive move by Owens to avoid the liberal label, he said.

NEWS DIGEST

American hostage released in Beirut

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Shiite Moslem kidnappers freed American hospital administrator David Jacobsen on Sunday after holding him for 17 months and said recent U.S. moves might lead to release of other American captives in Lebanon.

Jacobsen, 55, of Huntington Beach, Calif., was turned over to U.S. officials on a street in Moslem west Beirut. A U.S. embassy official, who insisted on anonymity, said Jacobsen was in good health at the embassy compound in Christian east Beirut.

In Santa Barbara, Calif., President Reagan said he could not divulge details of what lead to the release, but that "we have been working through a number of sensitive channels for a long time."

Asked about the remaining hostages, White House spokesman Larry Speakes said it was difficult to make predictions but "we remain hopeful."

Police look for clues in Calif. murder

SAN ANDREAS, Calif. (AP) — Some unspecified leads were reported this weekend in the killings of two men and a woman, all of Utah, in a rural subdivision in Calaveras County. They were found Friday morning.

The victims were identified Saturday by Calaveras County deputy sheriff Jim Stenquist as David and Donna Miller of Salt Lake City, and Dennis Wiebe of Bannion-Taylorville.

"Some of the leads look good," said Stenquist. "A lot of information has to be checked out. Some (leads) look as though they can be developed further, but so far it hasn't developed enough to point to a particular suspect."

Stenquist gave no details about the leads.

Stenquist said between 30 and 40 officers helped in an intensive search of the area. "No suspects were found. At this time, we're trying to determine who the suspects are. We do not have any eyewitnesses."

GOP seeks gubernatorial majority

WASHINGTON (AP) — Republicans are almost certain to score gains in governor's races Tuesday, but it would take a sweep of 10 tossup contests for them to come out of the 1986 elections with their goal: a majority of the nation's governorships.

A survey of the races by Associated Press reporters in the 36 states electing governors this year found Democratic candidates appeared safe in 11 states and leaning ahead in two more.

In five states the Republican was safe and four more states were leaning GOP.

The remaining 14 states, a surprisingly large number, remain tossups going into Election Day. But Republicans must win 10 of those 14 neck-and-neck races if they are to capture a gubernatorial majority for the first time since 1969.

Pres. Benson cancels a visit to Idaho

BOISE, Idaho (AP) — Ezra Taft Benson, president of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, suffering from "anxious exhaustion," cancelled an appearance before nearly 14,000 church faithfuls at an area conference in Boise on Sunday.

Benson, 87, would have been the first prophet and president of the LDS Church to attend a regional conference in Idaho.

"I was heartbroken; I was disappointed," Marvin J. Ashton, a member of the Council of Twelve Apostles, told members of 10 stakes from Boise, Meridian and Mountain Home after being informed late Saturday night that Benson would not attend.

"The excitement of contemplating being with you all week ... has caused an anxious exhaustion that makes it impossible for him to be here today," Ashton said.

Waldheim denies he ever fought

By the Associated Press

Austrian President Kurt Waldheim said he never fought Yugoslav partisans during a Nazi operation and denied that the Soviets tried to blackmail him into becoming a spy by threatening to charge him with war crimes, his spokesman said.

Gerold Christian, the spokesman, made the comments after the Washington Post reported recently that Waldheim had acknowledged after months of denial that he served in Kozara, site of a brutal Nazi "pacification" operation.

Thousands of Yugoslavs died in that province during the 1942 operation. The Post said that Waldheim was recommended for a German army medal for his role.

It said that, in a 13-page memo sent to the Post in April, the former U.N. secretary-general denied involvement in the operation to remove 80,000 residents, including 3,500 armed partisans, from Kozara, in the western part of the Bosnia province.

The Post quoted Christian as saying "additional research" had revealed the memo was incorrect. Christian said Waldheim was in the Kozara area for a short period and quoted the president as saying he was not directly involved in fighting and did not witness mass killings.

"Waldheim never took part in any way in actions against partisans or Jews," Christian said. He said Waldheim was a supply officer.

In Washington, Justice Department spokesman Patrick Korten said the department had known earlier about Waldheim's presence in the region, and that Waldheim had confirmed it.

Christian also said that Waldheim

"categorically denied" he was contacted to work as an agent for the Yugoslavs or the Soviets.

The Post quoted former Yugoslav officials as saying that Yugoslav and Soviet intelligence operatives tried blackmailing Waldheim in 1947 and 1948 into becoming a communist agent by threatening to charge him with war crimes if he did not cooperate.

Anton Kolendic, the senior Yugoslav intelligence agent in Vienna during that time, was quoted as saying that he gave Waldheim's file to Soviet intelligence agents and that he was "absolutely certain" the approach had been made.

The statement from Waldheim's office said, "Dr. Waldheim was never approached by any country in an effort to recruit him for such country's intelligence service."

Richard Maddox, a former Apple Computer employee, is getting used to Provo's slow life after living in California.

Richard Maddox

Apple computer ace starts school at BYU

BONNIE BARKER
Verse Staff Writer

Unlike many students, former Apple Computer Inc. employee Richard Maddox isn't worried about getting a "real job" when he graduates. He is MTC Italian instructor at BYU this fall after a 4-year stay with the California-based company. The decision to leave work was one of the hardest decisions of my life, said the native of San Jose, Calif. "It was hard giving up a six-figure salary. We could've easily bought a house and lived happily ever after, but we did this, and we're glad we did." Maddox said he began working as a stock clerk for Apple Computer while he was still in high school. He used it as a new company and wanted a job. After six months he was promoted to material planning, at which time he began attending "University" classes during his free time. The courses helped him with present and future jobs as well as stress-reduction techniques. The business major went on to become a purchasing agent, stock clerk, supervisor and master production planner. Maddox was hired by company founder Steven Wozniak as part of the Macintosh team which set up a division in Fremont, Calif. He also set up production procedures for software duplication at their plant in Dallas. Maddox said he came to school because he realized he wouldn't be able to attain the position he wanted without a business education. "I came to BYU because they have a good business school. The GE classes are tough. I can't see how I'll apply them to the position I'll do, but I realize they're needed for a well-rounded education," he said. Maddox, who was married in August, said his wife was also an influence in his decision to come to BYU. "We both decided it would be a good thing to do to go to school and then go back to work. It's a struggle adjusting to the slower pace. We enjoy it, it's just very different. People trust you ... they don't even ask for your ID when you cash a check." Even though Maddox is a member of Apple Computer Inc. Stock Holders Committee, the returned missionary from Italy said he doesn't plan on working for Apple when he graduates. At some point, he's considering working in New York and Italy, where he has already received an offer. "I enjoy business classes, but I'm looking forward to graduation and moving back to California."

Majority says government does tell lies, but shouldn't

NEW YORK (AP)—Nearly three-quarters of those surveyed for a New York Times-CBS Poll said they believe it is wrong for the federal government to lie to Americans to achieve the foreign policy goal. However, 53 percent of the 2,016 adults who participated in the poll on government credibility said they believed that the government told the truth only some of the time. Only one percent said they believe the government tells the truth all the time. Thirty-four percent said they thought the government tells the truth most of the time and nine percent said the government hardly ever tells the truth. The survey was conducted by telephone Oct. 24-28 after the controversy over charges that the White House had planted false reports about Libyan terrorist attacks. It found that most of those polled rejected Secretary of State George P.

Shultz's stand that lying in the nation's interest was sometimes justified. The participants were asked whether they thought "it is all right for the administration to lie to the people" to "achieve a foreign policy goal." Some 73 percent said it was not, while 18 percent answered that dishonesty would be justified. Seven percent said it would depend on the situation. Republicans rejected lying by a margin on 67 percent to 25 percent. Supporters of President Reagan's foreign policy rejected lying by a similar margin, the poll showed. Meanwhile, 46 percent of those who approved of lying to achieve policy goals said they believed the government told the truth all or most of the time, a seeming bargain. There was a three percent error margin in the survey.

Jaime Weaver

Blind student a "public educator"

By ANN SOUTH
Universe Staff Writer

Educating the public and "being treated like everyone else" are goals of a BYU sophomore music major, who happens to be blind.

Jaime Weaver, who was born blind, founded "Weaver's Unique Braille Services," which is based in her home in Spokane, Wash. The company prints restaurant menus, directories and other literature in braille.

She started her business because "it was absolutely necessary; no restaurants had menus printed in braille." Her father runs the company while she is attending school at BYU.

Her latest project is a training film for restaurant employees about dealing with blind patrons. She co-directed and produced the film and hopes fast food chains will be interested in it.

"I want to do these films for all types of handicaps and all types of employment," she said.

The theme of her film is communication. She said restaurant employees need to learn how to talk to handicapped people.

"Often when I'm in a restaurant, the waitress looks at my companion and says 'What does she want?'" Weaver said.

She also does volunteer work as a representative for the March of Dimes. She speaks to various state clubs and state-level organizations about supporting the March of Dimes and about being handicapped.

"When you're a handicapped person, you automatically become a public educator," Weaver said. "I believe in public education. People need to tell each other about each other."

She also would like to educate those around her.

"I think a lot of people see a blind person and approach him or her as a walking, talking compassionate service project," Weaver said.

She explained that although she'd like to be accepted like anyone else, she does have certain limitations.

"It's okay to ask if I need help," she said. "I need people who are willing to help me out sometimes."

Weaver finds part of this help in her guide dog, Krona, a black female Labrador. Krona was trained by Jaime Weaver, a sophomore from Spokane, Wash., starting her own company selling products for the blind.

Guide Dogs for the Blind, Inc., in San Raphael, Calif. Weaver has owned Krona for two years.

"She's a great pal," Weaver said. "She stops at all curbs, stairs and obstacles she can't go around."

Weaver also notes Krona is a great conversation opener.

"When someone has a cane, people automatically feel sorry for him, but they really like the dog," she said.

Weaver enjoys BYU and said "people here really seem to care." She also said she finds BYU's facilities for the handicapped adequate.

"BYU offers a lot for the handicapped," she said. "There are reading rooms in the library, separate rooms in the testing center and reading services."

Although she must arrange her schedule to accommodate some of these services, Weaver said blindness has not really hindered her.

"I think of it as a characteristic, not a handicap," she said.

Polynesian performance a family tradition

By JILL SJOGREN
Universe Staff Writer

Michelle Kalauli, a sophomore from Montezuma Creek, Utah, is continuing a family tradition of involvement at BYU.

Kalauli is currently president of the Polynesian club, an office her father, Mitchell Kalauli, held when he was a BYU student in 1964.

Kalauli is also a member of the BYU's Lamanite Generation, International Students Association and Aloha Islanders, a private performing group.

Kalauli's father said when he started performing at BYU, the Lamanite Generation was not yet in existence.

However, he did tour and perform for the Indian Education Department and the BYU Program Bureau, in addition to regular performances on weekends at the Roadway Inn in Provo.

"Performing is a tradition in our family," he said. "We've always put on family programs, and all of our children dance and sing. We start them off really young."

Michelle has been around dance and culture all of her life,, he said. "Her experience started when we lived in the South Pacific and then in Hawaii when I worked at the Polynesian Cultural Center."

Kalauli is now preparing for her first tour with the Lamanite Generation this spring.

"We're going to Ecuador, Columbia, Puerto Rico, the Dominican Republic and Jamaica as representatives of the Polynesian, Indian and South American people," she said.

The Lamanite Generation promotes Lamanite culture, from Polynesian to South American to Native American, through songs and dances. It also represents BYU and the LDS Church, she added.

Although Kalauli has lived and been exposed to various cultures while growing up, she was born in Provo.

"I was a BYU baby," said Kalauli. "My father who is full Hawaiian and my mother who is Haole (white) met at the Y."

Michelle is a business major and is interested in working in international business in Tahiti.

"I've always wanted to go there," said Kalauli. "That's my dream."

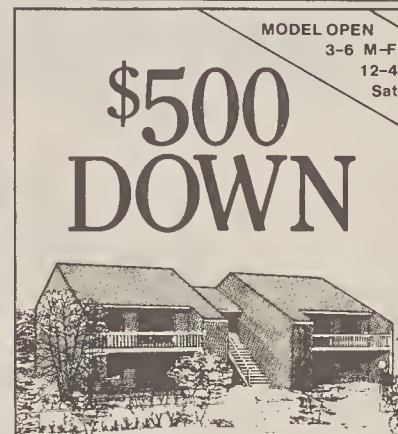

Denies CIA links

Hasenfus acknowledged he had written and signed a four-page document that the prosecution has described as a confession to charges that he was a part of the operation.

Former restaurant manager says 'finish your education'

STEN K. ROPER
Staff Writer

19-year-old BYU freshman who returned to college after working for four years recommends everyone finish college. "I have a responsibility to educate myself to do for a family and to do service in the church," said Mejia, a recent convert to The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. "After graduating from high school, Mejia went to a college in Jacksonville, Texas for a year, but he said he didn't know what he was looking for. "I wasn't a serious student," he said. "At college, Mejia worked at a number of restaurants in some state of Louisiana and in Tennessee. He worked as a manager and night manager. He moved around from hamburger places to fried chicken places; probably because I really didn't like it. I work long hours and usually seven days a week," he said. "I joined the LDS church about two years ago, when I was working every Sunday as a forklift operator. "I was a new member and really wanted to be involved. But I

Card-playing spreads colds

HESTER, Minn. (AP) — While kissing may be a gamble, there's a greater risk of catching a cold playing poker, according to a specialist in infectious diseases. "It's a common myth that kissing spreads colds," says Dr. Timothy Sankary of San Francisco. "But kissing has been done where cold-free people kiss people who have colds and the bug didn't spread." On the other hand, playing cards is a reliable way to spread the cold, says Sankary, because cards handled by an infected player.

The dream comes true on January 5, 1987, when McCombs begins work for the firm.

"It scares me," he said.

"It's a lot of fun working with the media. I have a lot to learn, but I'm very excited about it."

At the end of August he went to New York to work at his new job for two weeks.

"When I got out there I found the people are very aggressive. You have to be competitive and good at what you're doing."

While he was in New York, McCombs experienced all kinds of treatment.

He was driven to work in a limousine, and in the same two weeks he was mugged. He said the mugging was really a fluke, but he now feels like an authentic New Yorker.

Of course, McCombs didn't just fall into this job.

The firm was influenced by his long experience working with conferences on campus.

He works with the Church Education System — Youth and Family Programs Department, which is a division of the Continuing Education Department of the university.

McCombs began working at this job when a friend was leaving and suggested he apply.

"As far as I'm concerned, I have the best job on campus. Our office is like a family."

McCombs works as a program administrator for the department. In this capacity, he helps to plan and promote conferences, write brochures, decide themes for conferences, pick audiences and decide how to advertise.

"It's very rewarding, and that's going to be one of the hardest things about leaving."

McCombs, who works part time during the school year and full time during the summer, has been involved in several summer programs.

These include Especially for the Deaf, Boys World of Adventure and Especially for Singles.

The job also includes contacting speakers for these conferences.

"One of the highlights of this job and the conferences is the talented speakers."

During the school year, McCombs helps organize a program called The Best of Especially for Youth.

Statman, Robot get reduced fine at BYU traffic court

As we left Statman, he was wondering why on earth Robot would park the statmobile in a handicapped zone.

Later in the statcave, Statman reviews Robot's history files.

"Now I understand, Robot was having a partial meltdown at the time and considered himself handicapped."

"Well, we'll have our day in court. I wonder what the average results for cases in student courts are. Let's go talk to the attorney general."

Later... "Well, that was interesting — with an average of 6388.5 parking and 202.2 moving violations per month (Fall and Winter), only a total of 393 (both moving and parking included) are tried in court.

"The breakdown of results seems quite interesting: 11.6 percent were found guilty, and a full fine assessed; 35.12 percent were found guilty, but their fine was reduced by some degree; 11.7 percent were found guilty and their fine suspended; 12.72 percent of the cases were dismissed; and 4.84 percent were found not guilty."

"Oh, and here's an interesting one, Statman, 22.9 percent of those who appealed their tickets failed to appear in court, and 1.02 percent were moving violations with a plea of not guilty entered."

"Well, Robot, I hope for your sake that when we go to court, we either fall in the fine reduced or the fine suspended categories. Otherwise, I won't let you go to Primary Childrens Robot Repair for your weekly lube job."

Later, Statman and Robot are on their way to court.

"Statman, should I plead insanity on the grounds I don't have an organic brain?"

"Robot, get real."

"That's not funny, Statman. You know I can't help not being real."

Still later, in court, the prosecuting attorney asks what relations Robot is to Statman. "I am his creator."

"I guess that makes you Robot's legal guardian, doesn't it?"

"Well, I guess if robots can have a guardian, I'm his."

"BYU law states that all dependents and spouses are considered students and can only park in the places that the car is stickered for. Furthermore, BYU, like the state of Utah, requires that a person must not only be handicapped, but also hold a handicapped parking permit to park in a handicapped zone. Did Robot have a permit?"

"No."

"The prosecution rests."

"Statman, we could be in trouble."

"No, YOU could be in trouble. Can you say scrap metal, boys and girls? I knew you could."

After five minutes, the judge announces he has reached a decision.

"Statman, this court finds you guilty of parking in a restricted zone without a permit."

"However, because Robot was not himself, the court will reduce the fine from $25 to $20."

"You can pay the cashier in the ASB."

"Well, Statman, it could have been worse."

If you have any questions of a statistical nature, write Statman, Box 62 TMCB. All letters will be considered.

Gene-splicing creates new foods

NEW YORK (AP)—Gene-splicing may soon produce lettuce that fights disease, peaches that don't grow on trees, or perhaps most importantly — calorie-free chocolate cake.

"Can you imagine what the public demand for these products will be?" asked Sanford Miller, director of the Center for Food Safety and Applied Nutrition of the U.S. Food and Drug Administration.

Laboratories using gene-splicing have been able to create chocolate cake and ice cream that taste exactly like the real thing but contain few calories, Miller said recently at a conference on food safety and nutrition sponsored by the FDA and the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

Eventually, he said, the technology could produce foods with all the tastes, textures and odors of the originals, but zero calories — "the ultimate anorectic food. You eat it and you're satisfied, and you starve to death with a smile on your face."

Gene-splicing, the technology that allows scientists to put the traits of one organism into another, also may produce lettuce that combats viral illnesses, or corn that can be grown underground. Or it may produce peaches from something other than a peach tree.

Although the technology to produce such things is developing rapidly, it may be a long time before the future foods are in the supermarket, Miller said.

It will also be hard to tell if high-tech food is safe.

When the FDA tests the safety of food additives, it generally feeds enormous doses to animals. But generally altered foods must be tested in the entirety, and it would be impossible for animals to eat the required amount.

So the FDA is turning to computer models and chemical analysis, Miller said.

He said that new ways of testing food safety were needed soon, because such high-tech creations are far away.

"Y" Guy Calendar

Taking a deep breath he clasps onto the cold icy handles that will lead him to the second story perch. As he climbs, a cold chill goes up his spine, not from the cold, but from the pressure of the moment. As he stands atop the perch he looks down at the masses who have gathered to witness the event. The coldness has now gone to his eyes — total concentration. He steps out to the edge of the perch and signals that he is ready silencing the crowd. One deep breath, and he plunges into nothingness...

The "Y" Guy smiles as he sees the judges scores 10-10-10-10-10.

"Just a Cougar Fantasy," the "Y" Guy says to himself. "But what a fantasy."

He sits back and begins to think of the blonde with the big blue eyes. Just another fantasy. And what about Preference...?
